Big, bold, and beautiful. That seems to be the blueprint for almost all smartphones at the moment. In the landscape of beautiful bricks, the likes of the Samsung Galaxy Z Flip5 is changing the narrative by luring consumers in with compact form factors and ironically offering fewer reasons than ever to actually flip open the phone. I've been vacationing with Samsung's latest foldable which was launched in Korea recently, and here's the low-down on it.

FLEX FORM

While the compact form factor of the Samsung Galaxy Z Flip5 remains more or less the same, the cover screen, or the 'Flex Window' as Samsung calls it, is now 3.4-inches across. The internal hinge on the foldable has also been improved resulting in a fairly flush finish once I fold the phone shut. The phone opens up to a 6.7-inch full display, which I talk about later on.

FAVOURITE FUNCTIONS

I love all the extra space which allows for the widgets to render beautifully. Apart from the usual suspects of last year, such as music, calendar, weather, there are some new widgets too. Google Finance, Smart Things and Direct Dial has found a space along with the older widgets. I can also pinch towards the centre of the cover screen to activate the Multi-Widget View which lets me see all the active widgets at a glance.

What's unique about the cover display is that it's almost a Windows folder-icon shape and not a perfect rectangle. As I scroll up to access more content, the little extra space gives me a preview of what's coming next. I also love how customisable the Flex Window is. Not only do I have access to a ton of pre-installed display options, but I can also choose among my own photos and even videos as the cover display background, which is so cool to see in action.

Giving me, and everyone else, even fewer reasons to flip open the phone is the quick-reply function along with chat history visible on the cover screen. Since Samsung Wallet has also been integrated, when I swipe up on the screen, I can pay on the go, view my boarding passes and membership cards.

The company has also introduced what feels like the coolest set of accessories to adorn a smartphone — a Flipsuit Case with changeable NFC cards. These are funky slip-in cards that can be inserted into the protective case and can be used for making payments and exchanging information. However, this is not available to Indian users at the time of writing.

MULTIMEDIA

As I'd written last year, while reviewing the Flip4, there are two types of people in the world — some who can ignore the crease and some who cannot see past it. The crease is as "visible" as it was on last year's model. For someone like me, it really isn't an issue because, from most viewing angles, the crease more or less ceases to exist and it definitely doesn't get in the way of me capturing endless photographs and videos while travelling, nor does it bother me while catching up on the latest episode of What's Wrong with Secretary Kim? The speakers remain loud and punchy.

CAMERA

The camera setup on the Flip5 hasn't been updated from last year's model. And while an upgrade would have been nice, I have to admit the setup continues to deliver stunning photographs. There's a 12-MP ultra-wide lens, a 12-MP wide lens at the rear and an under-display 10-MP lens on the main display. The stills taken on this are nothing short of stunning. The colours are just a bit amped up, delivering vivid but natural-looking vistas. The video recordings are smooth and a bunch of beautiful hyperlapses I captured in Galle turned out beautiful. The camera also performs well with macro shots of food, with many details and lovely colours.

Selfies taken indoors, even without the beauty mode on, seem half a shade lighter than I'm used to on my primary, the Google Pixel 7 Pro. In natural light outdoors, the skin tones are super accurate. If you're someone looking for a flagship foldable which delivers beautiful snaps for the 'gram and beyond, look no more!

TECH SPECS

The smartphone runs on the latest Snapdragon 8 Gen 2 octa-core processor, customised for Galaxy smartphones. All units have the same configuration of 8 GB RAM and 256 GB storage, although there's a 512 GB option as well. Performance has never really been an issue with the

The compact form factor is very refreshing to use

Well saturated hues on photos taken outdoors

Flip series, and Flip5 is no exception.

The smartphone runs on Android 13 and has the latest version of the Samsung One user interface (Ver 5.1.1). The phone has an IPX8 rating making it water-resistant for shallow submersions for less than 30 minutes.

The company has also said that the device will receive five years of software support. The phone is powered by a 3,700mAh battery, which specs-wise is the same as the one on the Flip4. However, it does go on for much longer. The discharge is slow and steady. I've been using it during my Sri Lankan holiday and after a day of heavy-duty photography and capturing the occasional video, the charge had dropped to 50 per cent by 4 PM.

The device did tend to get a bit warm when I had the hotspot on for more than 30 minutes or so, while travelling.

VERDICT

If you've been waiting to get your first foldable-display flip phone, now is a great time and the Samsung Galaxy Z Flip5 is a great option. With meaningful additions to cover screen functionalities, decent battery life, and a fairly stunning set of lenses, you'd have more than your hands full of deep personalisation and fun experiments to do!

Price: ₹99,999 onwards
Pros: Bigger cover display. Meaningful features on Flex Screen, great camera, decent battery life
Cons: No telephoto lens, pricey

Report shows 62% jump in phishing attacks last year

Our Bureau
Bengaluru

Phishing attacks have increased 62 per cent over the last year, according to the Securonix 2023 Threat Report. The number of vacation-related phishing attacks grew by 25 per cent compared to the previous 12-month period. Cybercriminals are sending e-mails posing as vacation requests from colleagues or supervisors, luring unsuspecting individuals into their traps. The average number of TTPs (tactics, techniques and procedures) and IoCs (indicators of compromise) identified per month increased by 14 per cent compared to the previous period.

Harshil Doshi, Country Manager (India and SAARC) at Securonix said, "For 2023 some distinct highlights around the surge in vacation-request phishing campaigns which revealed how scammers deploy social engineering tactics is unnerving. The Lockbit

3.0 ransomware, in particular, caused havoc in India compromising 600 GB of sensitive data."

TAKING NEW FORMS

The threat research team also uncovered a new attack campaign called the STARK-#MULE, in which attackers use US military-related documents to lure victims and run malware staged from legitimate compromised Korean e-commerce websites. Organisations and individuals must exercise caution when handling e-mail attachments, maintain up-to-date software and implement security training and awareness programs, he added.

Over the last year, 541 threats have been identified across a wide range of industries, sizes, and geographies. The top three most prolific threats identified were vacation-related phishing emails, SSH honeypot activity and RAT tools emerged as significant threats over the past year.

Organisations are witnessing an up-tick in vacation request phishing e-mails (25 per cent increase over the past year), which when successful can result in significant financial losses, data breaches and reputational damage.

SSH honeypots — decoy servers set up to attract and monitor malicious activity targeting — were seen across more environments than any other threat in the past year. There was an increased distribution of remote access trojan (RAT) tools on public sites which poses significant cybersecurity concerns.

Foxconn begins iPhone 15 production in TN

Bloomberg

Apple Inc's next-generation iPhone 15 is beginning production in Tamil Nadu, in an effort to further narrow the gap between its India operations and main manufacturing base in China. A Foxconn Technology Group plant in Sriperumbudur is preparing to deliver the newest devices only weeks after they start shipping from factories in China, as the company seeks to swiftly increase the volume of new iPhones coming from India, people familiar with the matter said.

The Cupertino-based firm is on a multiyear project to diversify its manufacturing away from China, de-risking the supply chain for its most important products as tensions between Washington and Beijing make trade less predictable. Before the iPhone 14, Apple had only a sliver of its iPhone assembly in India, which lagged China output by six to nine months. That delay was reduced last year, and Apple produced 7 per cent of its iPhones in India at the end of March.

The scale of India production for the iPhone 15 will depend on the ready availability of components and the smooth ramp-up of production lines at the Foxconn factory outside Chennai.
